

TUALATIN RIVER GREENWAY TRAIL PROJECT WRAPS UP

The new segment of the Tualatin River Greenway opens this Spring! Save the date for the grand opening ceremony and ribbon cutting on April 9, 2016 from 1:00 to 1:30 pm on Barngrover Street near the Tualatin Public Library. To celebrate this great new resource in our community, there will be activities during the month of April for families, nature enthusiasts and more. Check out our website TUALATINOREGON.GOV for more information coming soon!

What is so special about this trail? The Tualatin River Greenway Trail is a wide bicycle and walking path that meanders through trees, near the river and past wetlands. This new section of trail includes “a walk through time” - exploring the transition of the Ice Age and cataclysmic Ice Age Floods, extinction of Ice Age mammals and emergence of Paleo-Indians and early settlers in the Tualatin and Willamette valleys. Along the trail you will find interesting features about Tualatin’s natural and cultural history, including erratic boulders, cast fossils and information interpreting the Ice Age, volcanoes, and uses of the land over time. This project connects people with nature while enabling easy exercise and a much safer way to commute across Interstate 5.

The trail starts at Barngrover Street next to the Tualatin Public Library along the Tualatin River, under I-5 to the old RV of Portland site on Nyberg Lane. The path will continue across the old RV of Portland site when that property develops and connect to the existing greenway trail that goes into Browns Ferry Park. It currently connects to Browns Ferry Park through the Nyberg Woods shopping center, onto Nyberg Street and Nyberg Lane.
