The Tualatin Heritage Center was hand-built in 1926 by local residents and was originally known as the Community Methodist Church. It served until 1982 when a new building on Martinazzi Ave replaced it.

The building was originally located on the east side of Boones Ferry Road in downtown Tualatin. In 2006 the Craftsman-style church was moved to its new home on Sweek Drive to accommodate the widening of Boones Ferry Rd.

Today, the building is the home of the Tualatin Historical Society and offers programs and activities for the general public including plays, art shows, oral history and genealogical workshops, knitting and crocheting workshops, and more. It is also a repository of local history resources. The Heritage Center is available for family reunions, weddings, and receptions.
