CITY OF TUALATIN
ART WALK

A self-guided tour of Tualatin’s art, cultural and natural history.

THE COMMONS LOOP
1. Crabfish mosaic water fountain
2. Glass drinking fountain
3. Plastic history bands
4. Glass drinking fountain
5. Skinned-doe Coyote bronze sculpture
6. Glass drinking fountain
7. Spring Break bronze sculpture & fountain
8. Glass drinking fountain

THE LIBRARY LOOP
9. Library Avenue
10. Tualatin mastodon skeleton
11. Storyteller bronze sculpture
12. Courthouse Building - Tualatin’s Visual Chronicle

THE PARK LOOP
13. Police - Tualatin’s Visual Chronicle
14. Police officer statue The Protector
15. K-9 Kuts bridge
16. Tualatin’s prehistoric interpretive
17. Tualatin state park and trail
18. Interpretive panels - history of Tualatin
19. Lucetta Pitt Center - Tualatin’s Visual Chronicle
20. Heritage Center wetlands

THE WETLAND LOOP
21. Wetland trail
22. Sewek Pond overlook
23. Ice age erratic
24. Heritage Center
25. Trailhead sign
26. Kaiser Permanente’s Poison Prevention Garden
27. Kaiser Permanente’s art collection
28. Art in the Garden

HISTORIC STRUCTURES
A. Little White House (8570 SW Cherokee Street)
B. Wessel House (18400 SW 86th Avenue)
C. Mack House (8575 SW Tualatin Road)
D. Smith-Boone House (18815 SW Boones Ferry Road)
E. Sewek House (18815 SW Boones Ferry Road)
F. Robinson’s Store (18815 SW Boones Ferry Road)
G. Victoria George (8340 SW Seneca Street)
H. Heritage Center (8700 SW Sewek Drive)
Welcome to the ArtWalk — a self-guided tour of Tualatin's diverse public art. Whether you are a local or a visitor, whether you have half an hour or an afternoon, the City of Tualatin invites you to get out in the fresh air, take a walk and discover public art!

The ArtWalk has been made possible, in part, through a generous contribution by Kaiser Permanente. Kaiser Permanente's Tualatin Medical Office is located on the Wetland Loop of the ArtWalk. Additional funding was provided by the Emery Zidell and H.A. "Andy" Andersen families (ZIAN, L.P.) Special thanks to the Tualatin Historical Society for assistance with natural and cultural interpretive signs.

Please check business hours before embarking, if you would like to see the indoor exhibits on these loops.

The ArtWalk consists of several interconnected trails. Look for the maps like this to determine the route and watch for the colorful trail markers leading the way to an enjoyable adventure discovering Tualatin's art, natural and cultural history.

The Commons Loop circles the Lake of the Commons. On the route, you will visit an interactive fountain, poetry etched in stone, and whimsical bronze sculptures. Even the glass drinking fountains are works of art!

The Park Loop is 2.8 miles. On this route, you will pass: Community Park along the Tualatin River, artwork at the Juanita Pohl Center, interpretive panels about Tualatin’s history and the flooding of the river, a student-created skate park mural, a spur to the Ki-a-Kuts Bridge over the Tualatin River, artwork at the Police Services building, and a wetland trail with year-round waterfowl.

The short Library Loop* leads you to the Tualatin Public Library, home to the Tualatin mastodon skeleton and several spectacular works of art. Visit Kaiser Permanente’s collection of art and their garden devoted to the study of poisonous plants. In the outdoor space behind the building are colorful tiles featuring local plants and animals.

The Wetland Loop* brings you past Tualatin’s Heritage Center where you can learn about Tualatin’s rich and colorful history. Along the wetland trail, identify waterfowl year round. Visit Kaiser Permanente’s collection of art and their garden devoted to the study of poisonous plants. In the outdoor space behind the building are colorful tiles featuring local plants and animals.

The Commons Loop:
- Interactive fountain
- Poetry etched in stone
- Whimsical bronze sculptures
- Glass drinking fountains

The Park Loop:
- Community Park
- Juanita Pohl Center artwork
- Interpretive panels
- Student-created skate park mural
- Ki-a-Kuts Bridge
- Police Services building artwork
- Wetland trail

The Library Loop*:
- Tualatin Public Library
- Tualatin mastodon skeleton
- Several spectacular works of art
- Kaiser Permanente’s collection of art
- Garden devoted to poisonous plants

The Wetland Loop*:
- Heritage Center
- Waterfowl year round
- Kaiser Permanente’s collection of art
- Garden devoted to poisonous plants

Please check business hours before embarking, if you would like to see the indoor exhibits on these loops.

Tualatin's rich history comes alive in its old buildings. The alphabetical dots on the map represent historic buildings along the walk. The photograph to the right is the Winona Grange near the Commons (circa 1940).

Excavated in the 1960s by two Portland State students at a site near present-day Fred Meyer, this mastodon skeleton is an ice age treasure. The skeleton is carbon-dated at 11,300-years-old and is on display inside the library.

The colorful tile mural depicting Tualatin’s history, is located at the entrance to Community Park, along the Park Loop. The mural measures two feet high and thirty feet long.

This playful bronze sculpture commemorates the site of an old pet food factory.

The ArtWalk has been made possible, in part, through a generous contribution by Kaiser Permanente. Kaiser Permanente’s Tualatin Medical Office is located on the Wetland Loop of the ArtWalk. Additional funding was provided by the Emery Zidell and H.A. "Andy" Andersen families (ZIAN, L.P.) Special thanks to the Tualatin Historical Society for assistance with natural and cultural interpretive signs.

Please check business hours before embarking, if you would like to see the indoor exhibits on these loops.

Tualatin's rich history comes alive in its old buildings. The alphabetical dots on the map represent historic buildings along the walk. The photograph to the right is the Winona Grange near the Commons (circa 1940).

Excavated in the 1960s by two Portland State students at a site near present-day Fred Meyer, this mastodon skeleton is an ice age treasure. The skeleton is carbon-dated at 11,300-years-old and is on display inside the library.

The colorful tile mural depicting Tualatin’s history, is located at the entrance to Community Park, along the Park Loop. The mural measures two feet high and thirty feet long.