

Community Workshop

What's your vision for the region's newest employment center and neighborhood?

Thousands of jobs and a new neighborhood will be created in the Basalt Creek Concept Plan area during the next 20 years. Where will people working here live and play? The Cities of Tualatin and Wilsonville are working together to answer this question, creating a vision and plan for the future of Basalt Creek.

You're invited to help shape this vision at the community workshop!

This highly interactive community workshop includes a short presentation followed by live polling questions and a hands-on mapping exercise. The ideas you contribute will be used to create several alternative concepts for future development. You will have the opportunity to review the concepts early next year. Get involved now to make sure we get it right.
